A SENSE OF SEASON

What is happening in the parks during the fall? Plenty! Beyond the great recreational programming opportunities in our parks, our wilder park goers are also very busy. What are they busy with? All sorts of things, which we can learn more about through something called phenology. Phenology is the study of cyclic and seasonal changes in nature. This is a great way to look at and track what is going on in nature. Autumn is an extremely interesting time of year to look at these seasonal changes. Leaves change and days shorten, but also many people are asking important questions like, “when will the first real snowfall occur? Will robins migrate south this year? When will we see the last garter snake of the year? When will the first frost occur?” These are just some of the questions that one can search for the answers to during this fall season.

Autumn gets its nickname, fall, due to deciduous trees dropping leaves for the winter. However, there is more to fall than plants going dormant (also known as senescing). Many plants complete their summer work and are full of fruit and seeds. Many are also taking advantage of opening canopies and cooler temperatures to flower later in the season, like blazing star and goldenrod, or again like marsh marigold. Many fungi also “bloom” in the fall making it a prime time of year to look for mushrooms, including chanterelles, oyster mushrooms, and a variety of stink horns.

Animals use the fall bounty of seeds, fruits, and mushrooms to prepare for the upcoming winter. Invertebrates, reptiles, amphibians, and some mammals prepare to go dormant over the winter by gorging themselves to build energy stores they will need to make it through. Birds are also eating a lot of food. However, they are either prepping for a marathon migration to warmer climates or building up fat and food stores to tide them over until spring.

Humans are no exception to the changing of the seasons. Minnesota has many fall traditions like wild rice harvesting, apple picking, harvest celebrations, hunting, and many more. Anoka County has numerous parks and trails that are great places to watch for seasonal changes. You can also join program staff at Wargo Nature Center for our Fall Festival to celebrate fall with apple cider making, hikes, games, and more.

REMEMBERING RECREATION

Over the past several months, parks, trails and other open space facilities were often the only available recreation opportunity in our communities. Parks are seeing record numbers of visitation and people are rediscovering their city and county parks. While the circumstances are not ideal, the opportunity to reconnect with nature and explore new outdoor recreation interests can be essential to maintaining mental and physical health. Anoka County Parks provides safe facilities for you to try something new and find new ways to get out and enjoy the changing seasons.

FIND THE PATH LESS TRAVELED

The paved park trails are very popular and great for walking, jogging and biking, but great opportunities can be found off the beaten path. Most of the county parks offer natural surface trails that meander through the prairies and forests. These are great options for bird watching and nature photography. Another quieter trail option are the water trails. The Rum River provides great canoe or kayaking opportunities if you have your own equipment. If you are just wanting to try kayaking or canoeing, Wargo Nature Center in Lino Lakes provides boat rentals and programs to get you started on the water. The fall is a great time to explore the waterways with the cooler temperatures and stunning colors.

RECREATION FOR ALL SEASONS

We encourage you to take this time and find a new outdoor passion that you can do year-round. Enjoy biking? Try one of our fat tire bikes in the snow this winter for a new experience. Walking or hiking more your thing? Snowshoes will allow you to see the parks in a whole new way. Prefer something a little more relaxing? Fishing is a great year-round activity from the shores or fishing piers or even a frozen lake. In addition to having access to several lakes and rivers, Cenaiko Lake at Coon Rapids Dam Regional Park offers one of the only inland trout lakes in the metro area and is open for ice fishing to keep you going in the winter.

As in nature, there is always change and adaptations for the seasons and recreation activities. Try something new, explore a different trail, and take the time to reconnect with your parks.
